FCE DESCRIPTION

In this 1-week Flexible Clinical Elective (FCE), the student will learn essential information related to identifying and preparing for global health experiences that are available to medical students, residents and other medical professionals. Topics of investigation will include: finding a global health experience, funding a global health experience, and preparing for an international global health experience.

The core activity of the FCE will be reviewing, updating, and improving a document that provides hyperlinks to various resources and websites that are useful to medical students and residents who are interested in global health. This document was originally compiled by a UMMS medical student for the Massachusetts Medical Society's Committee on Global Health. The document can be found on this web page: <http://umassmed.edu/oume/international-medical-education/gh-opportunities/>.

FCE LEARNING OBJECTIVES

The student will complete an updated the document that can serve as a resource for medical students and medical professionals who are interested in global health.

By the end of this Flexible Clinical Experience (FCE) the student will:

- be able to act as a mentor and educator of other medical students and medical professionals who are interested in global health
- identify resources for medical students and residents who are looking to find experiences in global health
- identify resources for funding international electives and global health experiences
- assist medical students and other medical professionals in preparing for a global health experience
